National Poison Prevention Week

Date and Time: Sunday, March 15 12:00 am - 11:55 pm

Address: 555 University Avenue

National Poison Prevention Week (NPPW) is an annual public awareness initiative observed during the third full week of March, dedicated to preventing unintentional poisonings and promoting poison safety across communities. Established in 1961 through endorsement by the United States Congress, the campaign has since been recognized and supported by poison centres throughout Canada beginning in the early 1980s. NPPW focuses on education, outreach, and injury prevention by raising awareness of common poisoning risks—such as medications, household products, chemicals, and substances—and encouraging safe storage, use, and disposal practices. Through coordinated efforts by poison centres, healthcare organizations, and community partners, the week aims to reduce preventable poison-related injuries and ensure the public knows where to turn for trusted, timely poison advice.

National Poison Prevention Week

Date and Time: Friday, March 20 12:00 am - 11:55 pm

Address: 555 University Avenue

National Poison Prevention Week (NPPW) is an annual public awareness initiative observed during the third full week of March, dedicated to preventing unintentional poisonings and promoting poison safety across communities. Established in 1961 through endorsement by the United States Congress, the campaign has since been recognized and supported by poison centres throughout Canada beginning in the early 1980s. NPPW focuses on education, outreach, and injury prevention by raising awareness of common poisoning risks—such as medications, household products, chemicals, and substances—and encouraging safe storage, use, and disposal practices. Through coordinated efforts by poison centres, healthcare organizations, and community partners, the week aims to reduce preventable poison-related injuries and ensure the public knows where to turn for trusted, timely poison advice.

Femmes du Feu Creations: Tweet Tweet! - March Break!

Date and Time: Friday, March 20 10:00 am - 11:00 am

Address: 440 Locust Street

Tweet Tweet! is a 30-minute contemporary circus performance experience for our youngest audience, aged 0-5 years and their caregivers. The show takes place on a magical tree apparatus. The performers move from the nests, up into the aerial tree canopy, through the rope tree trunk, and on the floor. There is a large forest floor carpet that lies beneath the tree branches for the audience to sit and lie on.

Tweet Tweet! is the story of a magical tree and two young birds that discover each other, play, and learn to fly in its branches.
